

Travel Musings and Muses

When you're ready to travel again, you can use these websites as inspiration. In the meantime, they offer ways to venture vicariously.

—Elizabeth Harryman

Everything-everywhere.com

In 2007, Gary Arndt sold his Internet consulting business and began traveling the world. His blog provides encyclopedic information about places as diverse as Pont du Gard, France, and Tucson, Arizona. For each destination, he provides history, what to see and do, and photography tips. He specializes in discovering lesser-known places that will surprise you.

Luxeadventuretraveler.com

Jennifer Dombrowski and Tim Davis travel the world seeking active excursions by day and a touch of glamour by night. But don't let the "luxe" in the name fool you. Although the couple cover posh digs, their website is full of practical info, such as a do-it-yourself tour of Pompeii and lots of three-day itineraries.

The Travel Camel.com

Nairobi, Kenya-based Shane Dallas shares his philosophy about travel's power to bring people together. Through his stories and photos, you can explore exotic destinations such as Kurdistan, Ethiopia, and Somaliland. The native Australian also has valuable tips on safety and saving money, for when you're ready to travel far afield again.

FIND YOUR ESCAPE ON CATALINA ISLAND

Make the NEW Hotel Atwater your hub for adventure while you search for bison, ride the Zip Line Eco Tour, discover Two Harbors and more. Begin your journey with up to 30 departures daily from 3 convenient ports aboard Catalina Express.

CATALINA
ISLAND COMPANY

VisitCatalinaIsland.com • 800.446.0266

CATALINA EXPRESS

CatalinaExpress.com • 877.491.1212